Enchantress

By Gypsy

Mighty Mother, strike this blade with light that I may cast the Magick Circle I conjure ye O Circle of Art, to be a temple between the Worlds Wherefore do I bless and consecrate thee, So Mote It Be

Wild Enchantresses of the night, Ancient Lords of mystery Fill my cup with joyous light, be here with me
From all places come ye Come in peace and Blessed Be

From the depths and from the heights, Guard my circle cast in light

Fill me up with power and might, Watchtowers of the night
Powers of air, fire, earth and sea
I am calling unto Thee

Gracious Goddess of Moonlight with the gift of prophesy Send me visions crystal bright, reveal what is to be Daughters of Eternity
In your arms encircle me

Open now, O portal of power
That our Lady and Lord may enter

Gnome Queen hidden out of sight, Hail Powers of the North As ye are hidden, come to the light, I call ye forth
From each mountain, grove and tree
From the woodland come to me

Faerie Sylphs in eagle flight, Eastern Powers come Through the rays of golden light, I greet Ye at the dawn
Let me fly away with Thee
On the wings of ecstasy

Brave Commanders of Firelight, Southern Powers of Sacred Flame Watch my blade as it cuts the night, I call your name Won't you come and dance with me Round the cauldron, fast and free

Glistening Mermaids, Water Sprites, Western Powers arise Sail the waves the tides are right, I close my eyes
From the bottom of the sea
Sing your siren songs for me

Raphael, Gabriel, Uriel, and Michael Blessed Angels, empower this Magick that the Old Ways May encircle the World in Holy Light I raise the cone of power and send it out upon the winds of change With Love and Will

Hail Ye Mighty Ones of the Light, Ancient Lords of Mystery Guardians of the Sacred Rite, Daughters of Eternity
If Ye will, stay with me
If go Ye must, Blessed Be

And I thank the in the names of the Old Ones
Powers of Air, Fire, Earth and Sea
I release thee with the sign of the Wise
ones
To all places hence came Ye

Hail and Farewell!

Two Witches

By Gypsy

There was a wise woman, lived by the sea.

Great was her power, a witch was she.

Her hair black as night, her eyes green as malachite,

Her life filled with magick and prophecy.

While in the same town in another part,

A woman of song, with love in her heart

Weaving musical rhymes 'round those she knew in her time

Was led by Diana into the art.

The witch taught the chantress her mysteries,

And they practiced the wonders of witchery

In circles of light, two women worked through the night

With colors and numbers and imagery.

Then one day, Diana did so decide

This woman of song had to turn aside

From her friend by the sea, and find answers inwardly

A magickal dream was to be her guide . .

To the answers inside.

As the chantress went into her dreams that night,

Diana sent visions in sparkling light:

"Come awake, now arise," called to sisters with fiery eyes, Saying, "The truth is not black or white."

And then through the dream mist, a white light shone On the wings of a raven perched upon a throne.

"A magician am I," he said, and he winked an eye.

"Love casts out fear, you are not alone."

He said, "There is a magickal place I know.

Take a ride on my back, and away we will go."

Their journey was short, they soon arrived in the outer court

Of a wizard who lives where the four winds blow.

The wizard said, "Chantress, revealeth thy name

To the goddess and gods, be it so ordain
To the old ones, to the winds, as a witch your life will begin

When you drink from this cup while the candles flame."

She drank from the cup, and her name she told

To the goddess and guardians and gods of old.

A pentacle of power she received in that magick hour,

Made by the raven from silver and gold .

..

Silver and gold.

Then from the east, north, south, west, and beyond

Swept four winds, and the wizard, and raven were gone.

In a crystal she saw herself asleep as she was before,

Asleep in the moonlight, but not alone.

For someone was standing beside her bed.

'Twas the goddess Diana, softly she said,

"I'm queen of the wise, I'm within, I see through your eyes,

As I am the weaver, you are the thread."

When a dream dreams the dreamer, the dream's the real.

When the song sings the singer, the spell is revealed.

As she saw herself there, the dream began to disappear, And the chantress returned from beyond the veil.
